Lifeline

+ ROXY +
AUG 10, 2025

73
20
8
Share

lock in.

> *"If you can save yourself, you can save us all." -*Save Your Generation by Jawbreaker

One of the most commonly recurring themes in RW Discourse™ is trying to figure out how to 'make it.' How to live a happy & fulfilling life in spite of the challenges of our day. This includes myself & several friends on here & elsewhere. The thing about this is that authors & influencers tend to be well above the median in terms of self-responsibility & agency. Every now & again, the more honest ones will say it themselves, that many of our fellow travelers are actually just useless & using the challenges of our times as an excuse to lay down & die.

To set the scene, we are likely at the start of what will be one of the most pivotal moments in world history. The old order is dying, along with its ever aging supporters, with no clear alternative winning out just yet. The population will soon begin to recede, which modern societies (& more importantly, economies) have virtually no experience with outside of wartime. The only major religious belief that is shared across the West is Astrology, the rest is not only continuously receding but besmirching their own image on the way down. Modern dating practices have revealed that when everyone is able to make it on their own, a significant number of men & women have found that there not actually worth much as romantic partner. The low fertility rates & similarly frightening rates of people getting married or dating is putting extensive selective pressure on the modern population. It's not yet clear what exactly is being selected for, but it's most likely going to be the same traits that have always made it through.

To set the stage further, the following statistics apply to our peer group. Zoomers average at least 9 hours of screen time per day. Zoomer males average 12 hours a week playing video games, with 65% playing more than 3 hours per day. Around 40% of Zoomers are overweight or obese. Only about 1/3 of Zoomers exercise regularly. About 20% use non-prescription drugs, but much worse than that about 30% are using prescription drugs (mainly antidepressants & the like). About half of Zoomers exercise regularly. Males have never approached a woman romantically or sexually in their lives. About 25% have no close friends.

Let it be known that these aren't random numbers on your screen, this is the reality of your peer group. This is a handful of people you may come into contact with in the real world & most of the people you encounter online. And no, these people wouldn't have made it through any better in whatever their favorite historical time period they obsess over. Best case, they might've got married since women were essentially forced to settle for someone to live a halfway decent life. If they swapped spots, IncelChadRapistGroyper1488 would still be doing some pointless menial labor in Mycenaean Greece while Achilles would still be a renowned warrior today.

Something you may have been brought up elsewhere is the epidemic of learned helplessness, that is the psychological phenomenon where individuals believe they have no ability to control their situation (whether that's true or not). Once this is pointed out to you, it's impossible to not notice it. Most often with Zoomers but even Millennials in their 30's & 40's suffer from this mind worm. Occasionally, people in our camp like to cloak this in RW adjacent rhetoric. They can't get a job because it's simply impossible to get hired as a White Male™. They can't get a girlfriend cause all modern women are sluts chasing the top 5% of men. They can't move out of their mom's house in Omaha, Nebraska because rent is through the roof in Manhattan. They whine about political slop day in & day out, but have every excuse under the sun to not actually get involved with any organizations from Young Republicans to some random accelerationist militia.

For those of you familiar with Æsop's Fables, the story of the Fox & the Grapes is one of the most useful I've seen.

> A Fox one day spied a beautiful bunch of ripe grapes hanging from a vine trained along the branches of a tree. The grapes seemed ready to burst with juice, and the Fox's mouth watered as he gazed longingly at them.
>
> The bunch hung from a high branch, and the Fox had to jump for it. The first time he jumped he missed it by a long way. So he walked off a short distance and took a running leap at it, only to fall short once more. Again and again he tried, but in vain.
>
> Now he sat down and looked at the grapes in disgust.
>
> "What a fool I am," he said. "Here I am wearing myself out to get a bunch of sour grapes that are not worth gaping for."
>
> And off he walked very, very scornfully.

The gist is that people will belittle & demean things beyond their reach. Aside from being ancient wisdom, this is also an actual psychological phenomenon that you can watch in real time everyday. It's not a lie either, it's usually the mind convincing itself to ward off negative thoughts. Nietzsche refers to this phenomenon as resentiment, in the grander scale. It's why unattractive men become misogynists & why poor people demean displays of wealth. In the music industry, I noticed this often with small artists claiming more successful artists are bad musicians. Somewhere between the Fable for individuals & resentiment for entire peoples, medium sized communities see this play out via a 'Crabs in the Bucket' mentality.

This has started hitting RW communities by way of the spiritual third worlders.

This isn't to say that these issues aren't real, or that they don't affect your life on an individual level. They very much are & do. But these losers don't actually care to change that, seemingly the only people looking to change it are those who had the willpower to succeed regardless. People who have been involved with our sphere for a while know this well. Even people who have the balls to join something like an Active Club or other activist organization often only do it as a social club. They want friends who they can say "nigger" around but tend to be very flaky when it comes to actually putting in work or facing the inevitable consequences of being a dissident. Every organization I've ever interacted with has had issues with these types. Dr. William Pierce, James Mason & Commander Rockwell all expressed similar sentiments in their own writings.

From experience, I'll make it clear that these people are useless for anything other than forced labor. They don't care about whatever niche ideology they're claiming to represent, they just use its rhetoric to justify their failures. It's the mirror image of broke leftists blaming capitalism for them getting fired & evicted.

But I don't really care about niche ideological activism, not for this article anyway. They're easily dealt with by simply exiling them from the organization. The real purpose of this article is to simply say that no one's holding your hand through life. You're not getting sympathy, nor do you even deserve it most likely. Anyone who's ever tried to help someone who can't help themselves will tell you why. Ask any woman that tried to help an incel, or anyone who's tried helping a drug addict. Better yet, look at how many restaurants on Hell's Kitchen simply went back to their old behavior & shut down after filming. They're in their situation for a reason.

You can bitch about lack of friends all you want, no one really cares unless you're willing to improve your attitude & get out. You can bitch about the economy all you want, no one really cares if you aren't working to make it happen. It's like listening to fat person talk about how embarrassed of their body they are, while sitting on the couch wolfing down McDonald's. Better yet, your failure is my success. Every girl you don't talk to or job you don't take is an open opportunity for me & whoever else isn't a faggot.

The target audience for this article is those who still have time to not be whiny faggot & actually make a change. Somewhere, a 17 year old who browses Twitter a bit too much is wandering whether or not he should even try at life, while reading posts by middle aged losers who need validation from strangers online. He will either keep starring at his phone until he's 30 with nothing to show for it, or he'll actually function like an adult. I'll remind you that no actually cares except his mom, maybe.

Whether or not you "make it" is entirely up to you, regardless of any variables making that task more difficult. If you need some metaphorical "spiritual sun" to get past your insecurities so be it. On the higher end, if you did make it far enough to have a good life set up for yourself, you can just do things. There's multiple wars accepting foreign volunteers, dozens of third world countries with unexplored wilderness, parties going on every night in every major city. You can just do any of these things to kill the monotony, or you could bitch about it online.

As always, the choice is yours alone.

Hail Victory.

Subscribe to ICONOCLAST

By a Roxy a · Launched a year ago

Newsletter to spread the word of Revolutionary National Socialism & monitor the Collapse. Hail Victory.

Type your email… Subscribe

By subscribing, I agree to Substack's Terms of Use, and acknowledge its Information Collection Notice and Privacy Policy

73 Likes • 8 Restacks

73
20
8
Share

Discussion about this post

Comments Restacks

Write a comment…

Echelhaer 1d
Liked by + Roxy +

I found that it is actually incredibly relieving to realize and accept that the big picture problems aren't mine to solve and that there's no reason at all to fret about things that are in the realm of fate/providence/the gods.

It is very much in my powers to position myself in a way that allows me to deal with whatever may happen best as I can.

Whether that's a bit of money and contacts or self-sufficiency and a network of buddies in the bonnies.

Or anything in between but if you can't figure out how to change your circumstances in a meaningful way you might not be the avantgarde individual you think you are.

LIKE (11) REPLY SHARE

Aodhan MacMhaolain 1d
Liked by + Roxy +

I've spent so much of my early twenties chasing different things with nothing to live for, mostly music and fair maidens. Once I found out about everything, I finally had something to live for, something greater than me which I could actually have a hand in building. There's so much to do, I cannot fathom people getting bored or being content with failure. Sooner or later, people have to get creative and break out of the mental traps. I was favored by the fates to not have been born into the lower classes and instead be blessed with a plethora of opportunities before me.

Words are wind, deeds are iron. Good deeds build upon good deeds. The Gods favor those who act.

LIKE (7) REPLY SHARE

18 more comments…

Top Latest Discussions

Depopulation
This is another article taking aim at something that's generally associated with the left, and recontextualizing it.
SEP 29, 2024 • + ROXY +

Zero Tolerance
Stop pretending enemies are friends.
AUG 1, 2024 • + ROXY +

Winds of Change
America, & Europe, have moved massively to the Right.
MAR 7 • + ROXY +

See all

Discover more from ICONOCLAST
Newsletter to spread the word of Revolutionary National Socialism & monitor the Collapse. Hail Victory.

Enter your email…
Subscribe
By subscribing, I agree to Substack's Terms of Use, and acknowledge its Information Collection Notice and Privacy Policy

Already have an account? Sign in